PROJECT 421

Groundbreaking Monday

Courier staff report

A groundbreaking ceremony at 1:30 p.m. Monday will mark the beginning of road and utility work on Harrison Street (U.S. 421) for Project 421.

As of noon Friday, no decision had been made on where the groundbreaking will take place. Watch madisoncourier.com for more information.

The Indiana Department of Transportation announced last week that construction on the $9.5 million project to reconstruct the U.S. 421 approach to the Milton-Madison Bridge over the Ohio River is to begin April 15.

Beaty Construction, project contractor, plans to begin work on the east side of U.S. 421 (Harrison Street). This work will include widening at the intersection with Second Street and utility relocation.

Two-way traffic will be maintained during the first phase of the project, a news release from INDOT said. But, northbound traffic on U.S. 421 will not be able to turn right on eastbound Second Street to Indiana 56. Traffic east on Indiana 56 will have to follow U.S. 421 along westbound Second Street to Baltimore Street to Main Street. This traffic flow is expected to remain in place until about June 23.

All work on Project 421 is expected to be complete by late summer 2020.

Throughout the project's phases, drivers should expect lane closures and reduced speed limits in the area as crews remain at work.

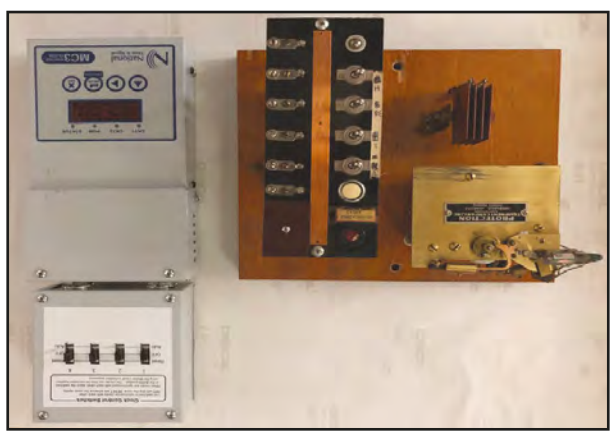
TICK, TOCK...UP GOES THE CLOCK!

A spit-shined face for an old clock

Vince Kidd and his son, Anthony, last week carefully removed the stained glass clock face from each side of the old Madison Bank and Trust Company clock on Main Street. The face panels in each section of the clock had fallen inward or outward over time, preventing the clock's hands from functioning properly, according to Kidd, who also said the clock hasn't worked for years, though he was uncertain how long. The electrician and handyman also replaced the old motors and wiring inside over a six-week period of work. (Courier staff photos by Trenton Scroggins)

Vince Kidd's repairs did not take long and included the cleaning of the stained glass clock faces and the clock, the removal of old motors and wiring, and replacement and custom installment of new motors and wiring. F.C. Tucker and Scott Lynch Group owns the clock, which according to the Jefferson County Historical Society, was installed between the 1920s and '30s. Others believe the year was 1954. The new system within the clock will now automatically keep the clock on time and will auto-correct after power outages.



Photos provided by Vince Kidd with Kidd Electric show the difference between the old system and the new, as well as the interior of the clock.

Suspect in school bomb threats now faces sextortion charges

Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — A California man charged with making online threats to bomb two suburban Indianapolis high schools is facing new federal charges involving alleged sextortion and intimidation. Buster Hernandez, 28, of Bakersfield, California, was originally indicted in 2017 on 26 counts stemming from bomb threats that temporarily closed Plainfield and Danville high schools and a shopping center in 2015. The Indianapolis Star reported that a newly filed superseding indictment lists 40 new charges, including child pornography, coercion and enticement of a minor, and threats to extort, kill, kidnap and injure. The charges allege Hernandez coerced or threatened online hundreds of victims, mostly girls, to share sexually explicit photos, and threatened to injure their classmates, friends, family and others if they didn't comply.

Panel backs 20 percent tax on e-cigarette

INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana would impose a 20 percent tax on the liquids used in electronic cigarettes under a proposal endorsed by a legislative committee. The Senate Appropriations Committee voted Thursday in support of the bill. The vote came after the committee adopted the tax on the price of the vaping liquid, rather than a 4 cents per-milliliter tax that was backed by the House in February. Republican Sen. Travis Holdman of Markle said the 20 percent tax comes out to a similar total tax on a pack of cigarettes and will be easier to calculate than a tax based on the amount of vaping liquid sold. Supporters argue the tax could discourage vaping, especially among younger users. The full Senate could vote on the proposal next week.

Mobile vehicle for Indy needle exchange

INDIANAPOLIS — Marion County is launching a needle exchange-program that will enlist a vehicle the size of a small school bus to combat Indianapolis' soaring hepatitis C rate by distributing clean syringes and collecting used ones. The vehicle unveiled the county's health department will begin visiting two eastside Indianapolis neighborhoods next week. But it could eventually make stops in other neighborhoods, based on recommendations by police and health officials. Marion County's hepatitis C cases soared 1,000 percent between 2013 and 2017, mostly because of intravenous drug use tied to the opioid epidemic. Public health director Dr. Virginia Caine said needle exchanges aim to reduce needle sharing, which can spread infectious diseases. The Indianapolis Star reported that Marion County will become Indiana's ninth county with a needle exchange.

Suspect fired first on officer

NEW CASTLE — Authorities say a 32-year-old man who died after an exchange of gunfire with a sheriff's deputy along Interstate 70 didn't have a license for the handgun he was carrying. State police issued an update on the ongoing investigation Thursday, saying Michael R. Gulley of Greenfield fired a shot from his gun Tuesday morning before the deputy returned fire. They say Gulley was in possession of methamphetamine at the time and was on probation for a drug case in Hancock County. State police say dispatchers in Henry County received a call about a suspicious person walking along the interstate and the deputy found Gulley in the median. Police say the deputy approached him to see if he needed assistance before the shooting. The sheriff's deputy wasn't injured.

Suburban company to create 300 new jobs

CARMEL — The Indiana Economic Development Corp. says a suburban information technology consulting and staffing company plans to create up to 300 new jobs by 2021 with an expansion including a training center for employees and customers. The agency says Carmel-based BCforward will invest more than $1 million over three years to establish the training center. As part of the expansion, the company will hire for positions at both BCforward and a subsidiary, Stafforward, in technology consulting and administrative and clerical positions. The IEDC offered BCforward up to $2.6 million in conditional tax credits based on the company's job-creation plans.

Pence to speak at Taylor University

UPLAND — Vice President Mike Pence will be the featured commencement speaker at Taylor University, a Christian liberal arts school. Pence is scheduled to address graduates of the school in Upland May 18 at the Kesler Student Activities Center. The school's President Dr. Paul Lowell Haines said in a statement that the former congressman and Indiana governor "has been a good friend to the university over many years, and is a Christian brother whose life and values have exemplified what we strive to instill in our graduates." Taylor University said tickets will be required for admission to the Kesler Center. They'll be distributed to members of Taylor's Class of 2019 and their families.

Not guilty pleas in fatal stabbing

GARY — A judge has entered not guilty pleas on behalf of a 75-year-old self-described retired drag queen charged with murder in the fatal stabbing of a man who allegedly used a gay slur during a dispute. The (Northwest Indiana) Times reported Edward Miller appeared Wednesday before Lake Criminal Court Judge Diane Boswell. His lawyer Casey McCloskey described the case as unusual. Police responded March 26 to an apartment building in Gary and found Carlos Johnson, 64, who had multiple stab wounds. Police say he was taken to a hospital and died. Officers followed a trail of blood from a hallway and found Miller. An affidavit said Miller told police he and Johnson were drinking and arguing when Johnson used the slur.

3 years in prison in waste scheme

CHICAGO — An Indiana man who pleaded guilty in Chicago federal court to an alleged scheme that involved his recycling firms reselling hazardous electronic waste has been sentenced to three years in prison. The Chicago Tribune reported Brian Brundage was given his punishment Thursday after pleading guilty last year to wire fraud and tax evasion. He also was ordered to pay nearly $1.3 million in restitution. Brundage owned the Chicago Heights-based Intercon Solutions Inc. and EnviroGreen Processing in Gary. Prosecutors say he told clients falsely that the companies were recycling electronic waste, such as video display components, and that it was being handled in an environmentally friendly way. Some ended up being sold to buyers overseas.

Indiana reminds you to file by the April 15 deadline

The Indiana Department of Revenue is reminding Hoosiers the 2019 individual tax filing deadline is Monday, April 15, 2019. This weekend allows customers time to file both electronically and through paper forms.

Paper tax returns require a postmarked date of no later than April 15, 2019, to be considered on time. Electronic filing can be submitted online any time before April 16, including through the Indiana freefile program (INfreefile).

INfreefile offers qualified individuals with an adjusted gross income of $66,000 or less in 2018 several options for filing both their state and federal taxes for free. All vendor options and qualifications for INfreefile can be found online at www.freefile.dor.in.gov.

"With nearly 90% of individuals filing electronically, many Hoosiers can still wait until the last minute and get their filing in on time," said DOR Commissioner Adam Krupp. "Filing electronically is fast, easy and results in an error rate of just 2% versus 20% for paper filing."

Still not going to be able to file by the deadline? File an extension with DOR or the Internal Revenue Service (IRS). If the federal extension is granted, an individual automatically has an extension with Indiana. The extension pushes the tax filing deadline back to Oct.15, 2019, for federal returns and Nov.14, 2019, for state returns.

Some military personnel are automatically granted extensions. Individuals on active military duty outside of the U.S. and Puerto Rico are automatically granted a 60-day extension period. Military personnel serving in a combat zone are granted an extension of 180 days after they leave the combat zone.

Remember, if an extension is granted, it only extends the time a customer has to file, not the amount of time to pay taxes owed. Customers are still required to pay taxes owed by April 15, 2019 to avoid penalties and fees.

For additional information customers may call DOR Customer Service at 317-232-2240, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. – 4:30 p.m. EST.

addiction. Minton said the program will help judges as they steer drug offenders into recovery programs. He said the initiative will help provide evidence-based information on best court practices to support treatment of drug addiction. Kentucky has been hard hit by the wave of addictions to opioid painkillers. Judges and court officials from across the state attended the announcement at the state Capitol.

County to pay $253K over claims of billing

BEATTYVILLE — A county has agreed to pay nearly $254,000 to the federal government to settle a lawsuit alleging its ambulance service submitted more than 1,000 fake reimbursement claims to Medicare and Medicaid. The Lexington Herald-Leader reported Thursday that the federal government sued Lee County and related agencies last year. It said the county-owned ambulance service forged reports to make patients seem sicker than they were so ambulance runs would qualify for federal reimbursement. Together with earlier settlements reached with an official from the ambulance service and the company that handled its billing, U.S. Attorney Robert M. Duncan Jr. said the government will recoup $515,000 from the scheme.

Third Muhammad Ali week celebrations

LOUISVILLE — Louisville will host its third annual Ali Week to celebrate Muhammad Ali's impact and mark the third anniversary of the famed boxer's death. The events spanning June 1-9 are coordinated by the Muhammad Ali Center and the City of Louisville. A release from the Ali Center said planned events include a carnival, an interfaith memorial and vigil, a homeless community project and an Ali film festival. Other outlets in Louisville are planning companion events, including an "Ali Appreciation Night" at Louisville Slugger Field, an unveiling of new branding material for the Louisville Muhammad Ali International Airport and a screening of Louisville's City of Ali documentary. Ali died on June 4, 2016, and was buried at Cave Hill Cemetery in Louisville.

2 more school districts subpoenaed

LEXINGTON — At least two more school districts have received a subpoena from the state Labor Cabinet for teacher-absence records during protests at the legislature this year. News outlets reported Thursday that Fayette County and Madison County schools have received subpoenas asking for absence records. Fayette County district spokeswoman Lisa Deffendall said the district hasn't reviewed the subpoena. She said the district would defend employees if adverse action is attempted against them. School districts in Jefferson, Oldham and Bullitt counties said Wednesday that they had received subpoenas. Republican Gov. Matt Bevin has criticized teachers for the widespread absences that forced some schools to cancel classes for as long as a few days while teachers protested at the Capitol. Kentucky Education Commissioner Wayne Lewis made similar requests for information earlier. He has asked districts to tighten teacher absence policies.

Human skull found outside residence

PINEVILLE — Kentucky State Police are investigating the discovery of a human skull outside a Pineville residence. Police said in a news release that a homeowner found the skull in the backyard on Wednesday. The skull was taken by the Bell County coroner and delivered to the state medical examiner's office Thursday in Frankfort for forensic testing. State police said detectives are investigating, but there is not yet any information as to an identity or cause of death.

Police seek car in fatal hit-and-run

MIDDLESBORO — Kentucky State Police say they are looking for a vehicle involved in a deadly hit-and-run crash in Bell County. A police statement said Adia Fuson, 59, of Ingram had stopped on a highway to help a man who was trying to reload a pressure washer that had fallen from the back of a pickup truck. Police say a black sedan with two men was traveling east when it left the roadway and struck Fuson, who was dead at the scene. The statement said the men in the sedan fled. Police say evidence at the scene indicates the vehicle is missing a headlight, a passenger's side mirror and should have damage to the front end.

Kentucky State Police seek escaped inmate

CENTRAL CITY — Kentucky State Police say they are searching for an inmate who escaped from the Green River Correctional Complex. Police said in a statement that the state prison in western Kentucky reported Charles Pedigo, 44, escapsed from the facility Wednesday evening. Authorities say he was serving a 29-year sentence on assault charges. Pedigo is originally from Scottsville and is described as 5-foot-9 and 230 pounds. Police say he has a tattoo of the grim reaper on his left arm and a tattoo of a dream catcher with an eagle on his upper right arm. He has ties to Allen, Hardin and Simpson counties. Anyone with information on Pedigo's location is urged to contact police.

WKU arts college dean reinstated after quitting

BOWLING GREEN — Western Kentucky University's Acting Provost Cheryl Stevens said the school's former Potter College of Arts and Letters dean is being reinstated after abruptly resigning last month. The Daily News of Bowling Green reported Acting Provost Cheryl Stevens announced Wednesday the reinstatement of Larry Snyder, citing the school's need for stability and its abundance of staffing changes. Former school Provost Terry Ballman left her role last week after the Faculty Senate approved a non-confidence resolution, which new outlets reported was connected to Snyder's sudden resignation. She said she'll serve as an assistant to the president for special initiatives until August 2020, when she is to become a tenured professor. Snyder is to resume his role Monday and stay until June 2021.

The battle is kicking off

Mayor Pete has caught the attention of Republicans

By BRIAN A. HOWEY

INDIANAPOLIS – One way to know you're picking up political traction is when opposing partisans begin to take notice; when you are no longer ignored. That is the prelude to 2 p.m. Palm Sunday when one of the most unlikely presidential campaigns kicks off in South Bend.

That's when Mayor Pete Buttigieg officially joins some 20 Democrats seeking to take on President Donald Trump and Vice President Mike Pence.

Buttigieg is now showing up, sometimes in double digits, in state and national polls. In several surveys he trails only septuagenarian front runners Joe Biden and Bernie Sanders. He's been a piping hot commodity on the cable and network talking head circuit.

Last Sunday on NBC's Meet The Press and at the LGBT Victory Fund brunch less than an hour later, Buttigieg got the attention of Republicans. In discussing his sexuality, Buttigieg told the Victory Fund, "It's hard to face the truth that there were times in my life when, if you had shown me exactly what it was inside me that made me gay, I would have cut it out with a knife. If you had offered me a pill to make me straight, I would've swallowed it before you had time to give me a sip of water."

In retrospect, he said, his marriage to his husband, Chasten, has moved him closer to God. And it brought him in proximity the political battle lines involving Vice President Mike Pence, a longtime foe of same sex marriage. "That's the thing that I wish the Mike Pences of the world would understand," Buttigieg said. "That if you have a problem with who I am, your problem is not with me. Your quarrel, sir, is with my creator."

That has now fully placed "Mayor Pete" on the Republican radar. Vice President Pence explained Thursday on CNBC's Squawk Box, "He said some things that are critical of my Christian faith and about me personally, and he knows better. We had a great working relationship. He knows me." Second Lady Karen Pence weighed in, saying, "Well, it's kind of funny, because I don't think the vice president does have a problem with him, but I think it's helping Pete get some notoriety by saying that about the vice president."

Indiana Republican Chairman Kyle Hupfer added, "These attacks contradict the relationship he shared with Vice President Pence when Pence was governor of Indiana – and also fly in the face of the positive statements Vice President Pence has made about Buttigieg over the years. Now that Buttigieg is spending more time in Washingtonm D.C., Iowa and New Hampshire and neglecting his day job in South Bend, it seems that some of his recent statements have become detached from reality. Buttigieg has decided that it's now more politically expedient for him to drag that relationship through the mud with personal attacks. As Hoosiers, we know that's wrong." Hupfer added that it contradicts a long-time Buttigieg call for political "civility."

It's true, when the two were executives in Indiana, they appeared to have a warm working relationship whether it was on economic development projects such as the Studebaker complex, or during the Dyngus Day festivities. During the 2015 Religious Freedom Restoration Act controversy that essentially ended Pence's 2016 presidential aspirations, Buttigieg was relatively quiet and didn't join the thunderous wave of criticism.

Pence spokeswoman Alyssa Farah added, "The last time we recall Pence even mentioned @PeteButtigieg was in 2015, after news that Pete came out, Pence said: "'I hold Mayor Buttigieg in the highest personal regard. I see him as a dedicated public servant and a patriot.'"

Politics is a game of contrasts and Buttigieg must compare himself to Trump and Pence. The three are about as different as you can be in politics.

New York Magazine's Andrew Sullivan observes, "Trump would be the oldest president in history at 74; Buttigieg would be the youngest at 39. Trump landed in politics via his money and celebrity after years in the limelight; Buttigieg is the mayor of a midsize Midwestern town, unknown until a few weeks ago. Trump is a pathological, malevolent narcissist from New York, breaking all sorts of norms. Buttigieg is a modest, reasonable pragmatist, and a near parody of normality. Trump thrives on a retro heterosexual persona; Buttigieg appears to be a rather conservative, married homosexual. Trump is a coward and draft dodger; Buttigieg served his country. Trump does not read; Buttigieg does. Trump's genius is demonic demagoguery. Buttigieg's gig is careful reasoning. Trump is a pagan; Buttigieg is a Christian. Trump vandalizes government; Buttigieg nurtures it.

"To put it simply," Sullivan adds, "Mayor Pete seems almost designed to expose everything that makes the country tired of Trump."

The Wall Street Journal's Gerald Seib adds that the "Buttigieg candidacy, in short, is a sign that the political system is at an inflection point, and voters are prepared to think outside the box."

To which the mayor told Seib, "I've bet a lot on that premise."

Seib added, "Put another way, as different as the two men are in most every way, Candidate Buttigieg might not exist without the example of President Trump, who shattered expectations and all the old paradigms in 2016."

So as Mayor Pete declares on Palm Sunday, the battled has already been enjoined.

Christian division reflected in Mike Pence, Peter Buttigieg

By LEO MORRIS

Would you like to see a self-professed, strongly committed Christian in the White House?

Which one? Democratic South Bend Mayor Pete Buttigieg or Republican Vice President Mike Pence? Both are quite candid about their religious faith, so we may presume it informs their political sensibilities, but the synthesis takes them in very different directions.

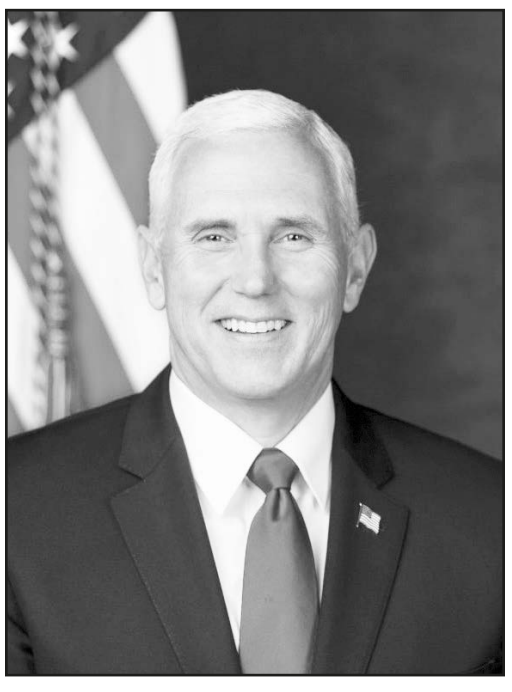
Pence, "a Christian, a conservative and a Republican, in that order," is a member of what the mainstream culture calls the "religious right," a champion of traditional values and proscriptive edicts. He is so mindful of his marriage vows and even a hint of impropriety that he won't dine alone with a woman or attend an event without his wife where alcohol is served.

Buttigieg represents the "religious left" movement that seeks to justify every progressive, secular proposal with a religious underpinning. Jesus was a compassionate liberal, you know, so he certainly wouldn't have disagreed with Mayor Pete's assertion that "Scripture teaches us to focus on lifting up the marginalized — to be skeptical of the wealthy, the powerful, the sanctimonious, and the boastful."

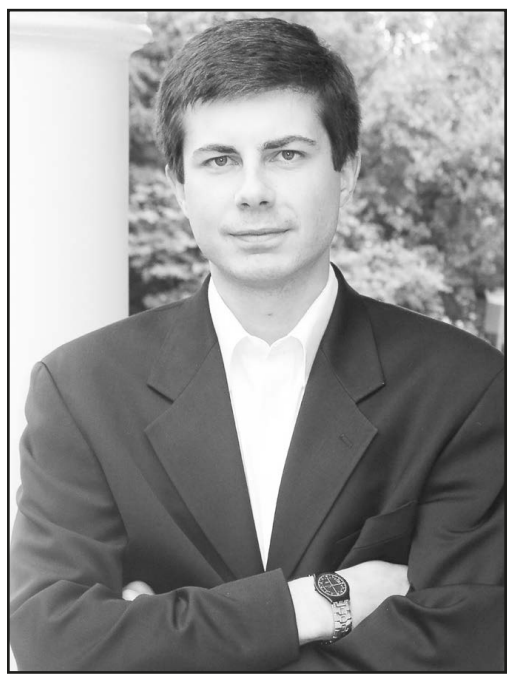
If we have trouble sorting out this dichotomy of Christianity going forward, I'm sure these two proselytizers will help us out.

Buttigieg already has disparaged Pence's brand of faith that would lead him to be "a cheerleader of the porn star presidency ... I thought he at least believes in our institutions and he's not personally corrupt, but then how could he get on board with this presidency?"

Pence hasn't been that explicit about Buttigieg's brand of Christianity (that I've been able to find), but we can infer his view from the fact the mayor is in a same-sex marriage, and the vice president supported a constitutional amendment that would have defined marriage as between one man and one woman.



Vice President Mike Pence



Mayor Pete Buttigieg

I wonder what Buttigieg thought of President Clinton's serial sexual misdeeds, up to and including credible accusations of assault? Did he chastise Vice President Al Gore for aiding and abetting a predator, or did he, like some members of the feminist community, look the other way because of compatible political views?

My point isn't to argue whether Trump or Clinton is the worse human being or whether Buttigieg or Pence is the better Christian.

It's just to note two men could profess to observe the same religion, following the dictates of the same Bible for most of their adult lives, and arrive at such different places. Thank goodness we have a system that allows the country to survive presidential religious idiosyncrasies as well as the moral failures of rogues and scoundrels.

Even if we can disagree on what the Constitution means about the "separation of church and state" since those actual words do not appear there (and we have, numerous volumes worth), we should accept the Founders purposely kept those two institutions at a respectful distance from each other. The fact too many people today forget the purpose was to protect religion from government, not the public from religion, does not negate the wisdom of the decision.

The Constitution does say, directly and plainly, "no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification for any office of public trust under the United States." That doesn't prevent voters from litigating the issue, as John F. Kennedy learned when he felt compelled to swear he would not be an agent of the pope. It is easy to predict both Buttigieg and Pence will face similar public pressure in their political journeys.

We'd be much better off talking about morality.

One of these days, I might compile a list of "the dumbest things" we have ever argued about, and near the top of the list will be the idea that "you can't legislate morality." People who used to say that — and a lot of people did, over and over — usually meant, "I don't want the law telling me what to do."

The law shouldn't legislate morality in general, in other words. It should legislate my morality.

But the whole point of the law is to strive for the common good. Some actions are beneficial to the community, and some are harmful; it is the law that draws the line between the two and punishes that which is harmful. That is a moral purpose. Some evils are so fundamental they are always wrong, and sanctions against them can be found in many societies across time and geography. Some of our notions of right and wrong change as our communities evolve.

It really doesn't matter what a president's religious convictions are. What matters is what the president understands about the role of the chief executive and whether that understanding translates into action furthering our progress toward being a more moral civilization.

Every president we've ever had has fallen short of such a lofty goal to one degree or another, and we have survived. We will survive a President Buttigieg or a President Pence.

If you want to pray that I'm right, go ahead.

Electrical fire stopped

The Madison Fire Department responded Thursday morning to the 1400 block of Chippewa Court after receiving a report of heat and the odor of something burning at a residence. When fire units arrived, they found fire conditions from the exterior of the residence, said a release from Chief Bill DeVries. Units entered the home and found an area of heat mainly in a small section of a wall and ceiling area, which they removed to find a smoldering fire. The news release said the cause of the fire was electrical and MFD ruled it accidental. Madison Police and King's Daughters' Hospital EMS also responded. Crothersville woman is arrested in 2 Scott County overdose cases

Courier staff report

SCOTTSBURG — A Crothersville woman was arrested on charges of dealing heroin earlier this week after sheriff's department and prosecutor's office investigations into two separate overdose cases.

In a Facebook post Thursday, Sheriff Jerry Goodin said Autumn Campbell, 36, was arrested on charges of dealing after the investigations, which traced the drugs in the overdose cases back to Campbell.

"It is believed that one of the overdoses stemmed from illegal narcotics purchased from Autumn Campbell," the post said. "Sheriff Goodin is extremely proud of the hard work of the deputies...the Indiana State Police and the Austin Police Department..."

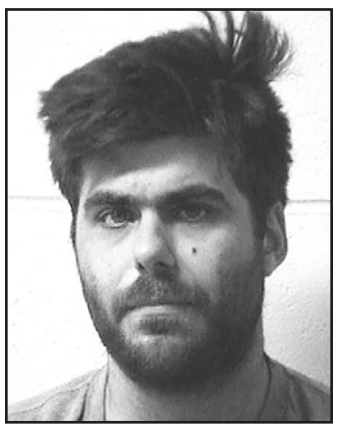
Scottsburg restaurant employee is arrested on 5 drug charges

Courier staff report

A fast-food chain restaurant in Scottsburg has voluntarily closed after an investigation into reports of drug activity, which led to the arrest of an employee.

A news release from the Scott County Sheriff's Office Thursday, April 11 reported the arrest of Linda Smith, 32, of Scottsburg, on charges of possession of a controlled substance, paraphernalia, false informing, trafficking with an inmate and maintaining a common nuisance.

Linda Smith



James Smith

Neither the sheriff's office nor the Scott County Health Department released the name of the restaurant; however, Smith's Facebook page listed her employment at two local restaurants, one of which was the Long John Silver's. After contacting both restaurants, The Madison Courier was informed by an employee at the other restaurant that it had not closed for any reason. A Long John Silver's employee declined to comment.

The news release said several tips of alleged drug activity at the restaurant led to surveillance of the restaurant. After conducting a traffic stop, Deputies Joe Baker, Darin Marshall and Phillip Thomas went to the restaurant to begin an investigation that led to the arrest of Smith. James Smith, 28, of Austin, also was arrested on charges of possession of a controlled substance, maintaining a common nuisance and driving while suspended.

The sheriff's office said the restaurant is cooperating with the health department. Anyone with information about the restaurant should contact the health department at 812-752-8455.

Jennings County head-on crash fatal to 2 North Vernon women

A two-vehicle crash on State Road 3 near County Road 25 East claimed the lives of two North Vernon women Wednesday afternoon about 1 p.m.

An initial investigation by Trooper Matt Holley of the Indiana State Police-Versailles Crash Reconstruction Team, indicated that a 2013 Chevrolet Equinox driven by Erma M. Campbell, 78, North Vernon, was traveling north on State Road 3. For an unknown reason, Campbell's vehicle crossed the center line into the path of a southbound 2006 Ford Focus driven by Rhonda R. Steinert, 45, also of North Vernon. The vehicles collided nearly head-on in the middle of the roadway.

The Jennings County Coroner's Office said both drivers were dead at the scene.

State Road 3 was closed in the area for about three hours for crash investigation and cleanup.

The investigation is ongoing.

The Indiana State Police was assisted by the Jennings County Sheriff's Department, Vernon Fire Department, Jennings County EMS and Jennings County Coroner's Office.

Jennings County manufacturer to add 70 jobs by 2021

Courier staff report

Decatur Plastics Products, a manufacturer of custom injection-molded plastic parts and components, has announced plans to expand its operations in Jennings County, creating up to 70 new jobs by 2021.

The North Vernon-based company will invest $11.4 million over the next five years to expand its 87,850-square-foot headquarters and production operations, adding 100,000 square feet to its campus over two phases of development. Decatur Plastics Products is now renovating and equipping a recently-purchased, 50,000-square-foot shell building in the North Vernon Industrial Park to house additional warehousing and accommodate light assembly. After the new space is complete, which is expected to be in July, the company plans to construct a 50,000-square-foot facility next to its new building by summer 2020.

The expansion will allow Decatur Plastics Products to meet growing demand for its products and services from customers in virtually every industry, including automotive, consumer products, electronics, medical, packaging, telecommunications and consumer industrial markets. To support its increased production, the company has started hiring and plans to add new positions in engineering, production and management. Interested applicants may apply in person at the company's headquarters — 2350 N. State Highway 7 — or email a resume to hr@decaturplastics.com

"Jennings County is in an advantageous location that allows Decatur Plastics Products to service our current and potential customers," said Robert Riley, president of Decatur Plastics Products. "Here, we have found hard workers who care about their community and want to see this area excel. As a company, we are proud to be a part of the exciting transformation that is taking place in Jennings County and look forward to working together with the community for years to come."

Decatur Plastics Products, which also has operations in Alabama, employs about 185 full-time associates in Indiana. Founded in 1983, the company provides injection molding, flocking, assembly and finishing services, as well as engineering and material assistance for its customers, including PK USA, Heartland Automotive and Faurecia.

In addition, the company offers supply chain services, providing its customers with inventory-management programs as well as warehousing and shipping services.

"We are happy and excited for a long-standing company from Jennings County to be able to expand and grow in their own community," said North Vernon Mayor Mike Ochs. "We are very pleased with Decatur Plastics Products' selection of the shell building and North Vernon Industrial Park for its future growth."

"Indiana's 21st century talent pipeline and pro-growth business climate, paired with our state's robust and diversified manufacturing industry, create the perfect place for companies like Decatur Plastics Products to invest and expand," said Elaine Bedel, president of the Indiana Economic Development Corporation, who made the announcement Thursday, April 11.

"The company's commitment to Indiana will help advance the state's reputation as a leader in advanced manufacturing while supporting even more great career opportunities for Hoosiers."

The IEDC offered Decatur Plastics Products up to $475,000 in conditional tax credits based on the company's job-creation plans.

These tax credits are performance-based, meaning until Hoosiers are hired, the company is not eligible to claim incentives.

The City of North Vernon approved additional incentives at the request of the Jennings County Economic Development Commission.

Lots of area roadwork underway beginning today

Multiple road closures and parking changes will affect traffic in the area starting today. They include:

Little Brushy Ford Road to close Monday

Little Brushy Fork Road will be closed starting Monday, April 15 from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m. for culvert installation work between Dow Ridge Road and County Road 850 East. The closure is only expected to take place Monday if weather permits for the work to be completed.

Clark Memorial Bridge closures

The bridge closed Thursday to prepare for the annual Thunder Over Louisville event will remain closed until 2 p.m. Sunday, April 14. Other streets and interstates around Lousiville will close for the event.

Louisville's traffic plans can be found at https://bit.ly/2IfsZyw

Jeffersonville's road closures and prohibited items list is at https://bit.ly/2G6ZHhR

Vevay streets closed for parking

Vevay police requested on Facebook Friday that drivers not park on Main Cross Street, Brindley Avenue, Ohio Street, Liberty Street and West Pike Street on Friday, Monday and Tuesday because road crews will be milling and repaving those roads. Police said cars parked in the way will be towed.

Parts of U.S. 50 single lane

The Indiana Department of Transportation will enact immediate single lane closures on U.S. 50 in Dearborn County during daylight hours in both east and westbound directions to continue widespread pavement patching and signal refurbishment between Walmart Drive and Doughty Road through the end of April, weather permitting. Continued patching from Indiana 350 to Walmart Drive and from Doughty Road to Interstate 275 will begin two to three weeks after the initial phase.

State schools get more funds under Senate budget plan

By DYLAN PEERS MCCOY and SHAINA CAVAZOS
Chalkbeat Indiana
chalkbeat.org

Indiana Senate Republicans are proposing a $535 million increase in school funding through 2021, a larger boost than the House's plan, according to a budget draft released Thursday.

The Senate budget would also earmark about $694 million to help educate children in poverty in 2021, according to lawmakers, an issue that has drawn attention in recent weeks. That's lower than the current overall funding level, due to a drop in the projected number of students who qualify for poverty aid, lawmakers say. But it's more generous than the House's March proposal, which would make controversial and significant cuts.

Under the Senate budget unveiled Thursday, the per-student amount districts receive for educating high-need children increases by $255, reaching $3,794 in 2021, said Republican Sen. Eric Bassler, chairman of Senate school funding subcommittee.

Senate leaders said the boost in per-student poverty aid aims to cushion funding losses for high-poverty districts compared with the House budget.

"I think that's a reasonable short-term solution to the challenge," Bassler said.

Total funding for schools would reach $14.9 billion over two years, under the plan. The Senate's 4.9 percent education spending increase is a little more than increases in years past and slightly higher than the House's proposed 4.3 percent increase. The basic per-student funding that all districts get would jump from $5,352 per student this year to $5,586 per student in 2020 and $5,692 per student in 2021.

The Senate budget also would increase funding for students who are learning English to $22.5 million annually, compared to $17.5 million this year. The amount districts get for those students would vary based on how fluent they are.

Overall, the budget received a muted reception from education advocates.

Ahmed Young, the chief of staff for Indianapolis Public Schools, described the Senate budget as "a step in the right direction," highlighting increased funding for areas including English language learners.

"They are beginning to understand and quantify the cost that it takes to address issues of poverty," Young said.

The Senate budget is "definitely better than the second version from the House," said David Marcotte, executive director of the Indiana Urban Schools Association. But he is still concerned about the potential cuts to the poverty aid districts receive.

"We're just not seeing less poverty in our schools," he said. "We still have a lot of children with significant needs."

The proposed cuts would be the latest in a series of reductions that have already lowered poverty aid by 30 percent since 2015. In the past, Indiana relied on whether students are eligible for free or reduced-price lunch to measure need. But in 2015, state lawmakers decided to shift to using the number of students who receive food stamps, welfare, or are in foster care. The new measure of need includes a narrower — and poorer — group of students.

Bassler said the legislature will look at new ways to measure poverty for future budgets, with the aim of stabilizing school funding and ensuring districts receive enough to educate students in poverty.

Last week Bassler told Chalkbeat that the Senate would consider adding students who receive Medicaid to the formula that determines poverty aid. But the Senate ultimately did not include that measure. Bassler said Thursday that when staff did projections, adding students on Medicaid to the calculations did not benefit urban districts.

The Senate budget does not specifically increase pay for Indiana teachers, an issue that has gotten national attention. It does increase the amount of money for teacher bonuses, which go to teachers who are rated effective or highly effective on their evaluations. The budget includes $90 million over two years for those grants, which is distributed to districts based on their enrollment. Districts would be allowed to add up to half of the stipends to teacher base salaries.

Lawmakers have said that they can't direct districts to pay teachers a certain amount without taking away their control to bargain and negotiate locally. However, in the Senate's proposal to take $150 million from the state's pension stabilization fund to pay down schools' teacher pension liability, they do require school boards to hold a public meeting to discuss how they spend the savings.

Lawmakers in the House and Senate will ultimately have to come to a compromise between the versions before the session ends in three weeks.

Bunk space limited in Gibson County area jails and none is available for female inmates

By ANDREA HOWE
Princeton Daily Clarion

PRINCETON — Directed by the county's fiscal body to look to neighboring counties for jail bunk space as one possible way to alleviate overcrowding in Gibson County, Sheriff Tim Bottoms and County Attorney Jim McDonald reported Tuesday there are a few beds available, but none for women.

The scramble to find a way to ease overcrowding comes after a class action lawsuit was filed earlier this year against the county, following two years of Indiana Department of Correction inspections that cited the county for understaffing and overcrowding.

Tuesday, Bottoms said he contacted sheriffs in Knox, Perry, Pike, Warrick and Posey counties to inquire about costs associated with housing Gibson County inmates. Bottoms said Knox and Perry County jails are also overcrowded and can't accept any inmates from other counties. He said he was told two weeks ago that Pike County could accept five or fewer inmates, Warrick County could accept five inmates and Posey County could accept fewer than 10 inmates.

McDonald said none of the jails will accept female inmates from Gibson County.

All of the jails would charge Gibson County $35 per inmate per day plus medical expenses. McDonald said there would also be additional staffing and travel costs associated with transport of inmates to court hearings, in addition to requirements of court orders in advance of each transport.

McDonald said an interlocal government agreement would be required between Gibson County and each county where inmates are housed.

Farming out inmates to other county jails to reduce overcrowding in Gibson County is one temporary solution county council members told the sheriff to pursue when he asked them last month to hire six more jailers to meet DOC inspection staffing recommendations.

Meanwhile, input from a panel of local judges, the prosecutor's office, commissioners, council members and the public is being added to a commissioned long-range plan for the local facility. Commissioners hope to have the results of the long-range study sometime late this spring.

The sheriff also asked the council to advertise a $15,000 additional appropriation of the level 6 felony inmate keep money received from the DOC which is deposited to the county's general fund, for purchase of jail supplies including inmate clothing, paint for cells and a needle sharp shredder. Bottoms said the actual cost of the items is about $8,430 but the higher appropriation would help when more jail items are needed.

The request triggered a discussion of whether the DOC reimbursement to the general fund has to be appropriated only for jail expenses, or whether it's considered reimbursement for funds already appropriated for inmate keep at budget time each year.

Arvin Sango prepares to plant final 4,000 trees

By PEGGY VLEREBOME
Special to The Courier

Volunteers will plant about 4,000 trees and shrubs Saturday, May 18, to complete Arvin Sango's commitment to plant a 20,000-tree forest on its property. The public can help plant the trees, which will be the sixth and final planting.

The new saplings will join 18,627 trees and shrubs that have been planted since the program began in 2014.

Arvin Sango training manager Dan Grady, who has been in charge of the tree plantings since the beginning, and employees who volunteered to work their shift outdoors started weeding last year's planting area Thursday.

Nearby, this year's planting area is ready, except for the soaking it will get right before the new saplings are planted. Take boots if you plan to participate.

The planting day will be from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. There will be free lunch, a Nature Fair with activities for children, and drawings for prizes. Signs will show where to park. The planting area is near the Arvin Sango building at 2949 Wilson Ave.

Arvin Sango's tree plantings follow the guidance of Japanese botanist and plant ecologist Akira Miyawaki, who came to Madison in 2012 for the announcement of the forest plans and in 2014 for the first planting day.

Miyawaki has said he is responsible for more than 40 million trees being planted worldwide using his method.

His method is to build a mound of dirt and compostable materials and let it sit; Arvin Sango built its first mound more than a year before the planting day.

Rob Heiderman (far background), Linda Copeland, Kim Humphrey (foreground) and Dan Grady pull weeds from last year's tree planting site at Arvin Sango. The weeds had to be pulled by hand because they surrounded saplings that were planted last year. (Courier photos by Peggy Vlerebome)

The site where about 4,000 trees and shrubs will be planted next month was prepared last year. The public can help plant about 4,000 trees and shrubs May 18 at the final planting to complete Arvin Sango's commitment to plant a 20,000-tree forest on its property. The first tree planting was in 2004.

Preparation for this year's planting began last year, with 3 feet of dirt removed from the center, mixed with mulch and then put back onto the site, forming a mound.

Miyawaki's method is to plant trees close together. After a hole is dug with a trowel, the sapling is set into the hole but the dirt is not packed around the roots.

After all the trees are placed, mulch such as straw is placed around them and held down with string.

Miyawaki, 91, is no longer active in tree planting or able to travel, but his philosophy, method and successes have been well-documented.

Before any of his forests were planted, Miyawaki studied the soils and determined the species of trees that grew there originally, then specified how many of each species he chose should be planted.

For the Arvin Sango forest, the trees include several kinds of oaks, along with beeches, maples and others.

Miyawaki's philosophy includes that forests provide serenity, protection from storms, and a crucial counter to global climate change because they take in carbon and promote health by taking in the carbon dioxide we exhale and put out oxygen that we inhale.

Planting a forest was the beginning of an environmental stewardship program at Arvin Sango that was to include an 11-acre wildlife habitat to be planted this spring.

The habitat might be put on hold for a year because of other things going on at the auto parts manufacturer, Grady said.

Farmers Market, CSA buying clubs readying for harvests

By PEGGY VLEREBOME
Special to The Courier

The season for locally raised produce is coming soon, and meat and poultry already are available.

There are several options for consumers. They include a farmers market and at least three CSAs, or Community Supported Agriculture.

MADISON FARMERS MARKET

The Madison Farmers Market at the Broadway Fountain park at Main and Broadway streets has a new manager, new features and new vendor rules.

Manager Daniel Terrell said the new rules include that produce must be grown on the vendor's property; non-produce sold at the market must be from one business; a vendor cannot buy produce elsewhere and resell it; each vendor's business name and location must be posted at the booth; and the price of each item must be displayed.

Terrell said the rules are meant to "create transparency" to give shoppers "confidence knowing what they are buying and that it is locally sourced. … The lifeblood is the relationship between the vendor and the customer."

The summer Farmers Market had its kickoff last Saturday. The number of vendors will increase as harvests come in. More than 30 vendors attended the annual preseason meeting, and Terrell said he has talked to 10 more since then.

The Farmers Market hours are 8 a.m. to noon Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. There will be a breakfast vendor, live music and more vendors on Saturdays.

On Tuesdays and Thursdays, also from 8 a.m. to noon, produce and honey will be for sale to drive-up customers who pull over to a designated spot at the curb on Main Street at Broadway, at the southwest edge of the Farmers Market location.

The new breakfast vendor will be Johnny Jump Ups, whose owner Whitney Ernst is the niece of the previous vendors, Gary and Suzan Duckworth. Her plans and schedule will be ready in a couple of weeks, Terrell said. She will use Farmers Market produce and foods in her breakfasts, he said.

"That really promotes the other vendors as well as the deliciousness of the food," Terrell said.

For the first time, there is a sponsor of live music, Friendship State Bank, which will provide a stipend for the musicians so they don't have to rely on tips, Terrell said.

On Saturdays there will be activities for children.

CSA CLUBS

Community Supported Agriculture is essentially a buying club in which members sign up in advance to receive regular deliveries of produce, meat, poultry or a combination, and sometimes eggs. They deliver orders in downtown Madison.

CSAs are taking sign-ups now. Often a CSA will limit its number of members.

One advantage for farmers of having a CSA is that they have a "guaranteed customer base," two of the CSA spokesmen said. Knowing how many customers they have helps farmers know how much to plant or raise, they said.

CSA prices often are higher than grocery prices. Spokesmen for the three CSAs said part of the reason is that local farms are smaller than the mass-producing commercial farms, but that what is lost in economies of scale is made up in having producers and consumers near each other, use of environment-friendly farming practices and, for those that sell produce, freshness.

This pig is from Nightfall Farm CSA, one of the Community Supported Agriculture farms serving customers in the Madison area. Nightfall Farm is a meat and poultry-only CSA, while The Eaton Farm CSA raises meat, poultry and produce, and the Madison Area Growers is a produce-only CSA. They along with the Madison Farmers Market are gearing up for the summer season. (Submitted photo)

"We firmly believe in raising animals on pasture, caring for the land, and selling meat locally," Liz Brownlee wrote on the Nightfall Farm CSA website. "These practices increase the amount of time and cost for us, which is why the price of our meat is higher than conventional meat in national, grocery store options. That said, we know that our meat is higher quality than conventional grocery store options, too."

Three CSAs, in alphabetical order, are:

THE EATON FARM CSA

Eaton Farm CSA in Canaan is a market-style CSA in which members choose the items they want each week from the online offerings, spending "points" derived from what level of membership they have prepaid for.

The Eaton Farm CSA sells chicken, eggs, grass-fed beef, pork, produce and turkey.

This year, for the first time Liz and Jerry Eaton are allowing people who are not CSA members to order from their online store. Customers will pick up their orders weekly on Monday at Little Golden Fox, 602 W. Main St. in Madison. That is where CSA members pick up their purchases also. Others can stop by to see if there are any "leftovers" available, but CSA members have priority, the Eatons wrote on their website.

For more information, go to theeatonfarm.com and on Facebook: The Eaton Farm

MADISON AREA GROWERS CSA

The Madison Area Growers CSA, an agricultural cooperative, has two farmers who grow most of the produce, two who grow less, and occasionally other producers, said Laura Arico. She and her husband, Nathan, are volunteers who coordinate the growers and communicate with members.

The CSA provides sturdy bags to its members. Each Tuesday, members take their empty bag to First Christian Church in downtown Madison to turn in to Nathan Arico and receive a prepacked bag full of produce in return.

Members know what they will be getting because Laura Arico sends an email newsletter that not only tells members what will be in the bag but also gives tips for preparing and storing that week's produce.

A CSA with multiple producers can provide a market for farmers who might otherwise not be big enough to develop a market or have an outlet for their excess crops, Laura Arico said.

"From season to season we are able to support growers who are just starting out or growers who have a very small farm," Laura Arico said.

Sometimes, she said, a small grower who is secure in knowing there is a guaranteed market will alter their farming practices, such as using fewer chemicals.

On Facebook: Madison Area Growers

NIGHTFALL FARM CSA

Liz and Nate Brownlee raise hogs, chickens, lambs and turkeys at their farm in Crothersville and sell them and eggs through their meat CSA and also at farmers markets including in Madison. They have a separate buying option for each product.

Members pick up their frozen meats and poultry the first Saturday of the month at the Madison Farmers Market, where non-members can buy what the farm has available such as eggs, bacon or chicken.

Connecting consumers with the farmers who raise their food is among the reasons that CSAs are a popular alternative to traditional grocery stores, Liz Brownlee said.

"People can also be sure the meat is what they want, and that they are spending their dollars in a way that they believe in," she said. "We have some customers who are especially concerned about nitrates because they are fighting cancer. Or others who are cutting out meat with antibiotics and hormones because they have young kids. Some customers want our meat because of how we raise our animals — ethically, and in a way that's rebuilding the soil."

State natural resources says don't plant invasive pear trees

Ornamental pear trees, most commonly known as Bradford pears, have been a popular landscaping tree in Indiana for decades.

So popular that they are crowding out native Indiana trees.

For that reason, the Indiana Department of Natural Resources encourages homeowners and landscapers to avoid planting such trees and to replace them when possible.

"Over time different varieties of pear have cross-pollinated in our urban areas, allowing them to rapidly spread into our natural resources," said Megan Abraham, director of the DNR Division of Entomology & Plant Pathology.

Cultivated forms of this invasive species are most accurately known as Pyrus calleryana or the Callery pear tree. Commonly available ornamental pear cultivars, all of which are invasive and should be avoided, include Bradford, New Bradford®, Cleveland select, autumn blaze, Aristocrat®, capitol, Chanticleer®, and dozens more.

In addition to being invasive, these cultivars, which are known for their striking white flowers, typically don't last long. They are structurally weaker and more easily damaged by storms than native trees.

Carrie Tauscher, urban forestry coordinator with the DNR Division of Forestry, says evidence of the trees' rapid spread is easy to see.

"Just take a look for glossy leaved, egg-shaped trees in highway interchanges," Tauscher said. "It's common to find them in unmown areas under utility lines and in lots and fields initially cleared for construction that are then left fallow."

Stopping the spread of this invasive plant means selecting alternate trees for yards and forested property. The best tree to replace any invasive tree species is one that is native to a particular region.

If you are looking for an alternative flowering tree for Indiana, serviceberry trees, which have similar white blooms in the spring and fruits that attract wildlife, are one option. Eastern redbuds, which grow quickly with eye-catching lavender flowers in the spring, are another option.

To learn more about native trees that are great for landscaping, visit the Indiana Native Plant and Wildflower Society page at inpaws.org/landscaping.

For more information on all invasive species that could affect Indiana and ways to help stop their spread, see dnr.IN.gov//3123.htm

Unbeaten Carroll Co. rolls to All 'A' Classic 8th Region softball title 12-6 over Demons

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Carroll County softball rolled over Williamstown 12-6 to claim its first-ever All "A" Classic Eighth Region championship on Thursday at Williamstown.

The Panthers did most of their damage in the late innings. After going ahead 1-0 in the second on a Jordan Ray RBI double, Carroll scored three runs in the fourth on a two-run RBI by Jordyn Shepherd and an RBI single by Bailey Mefford.

Carroll added a run in the fifth when Ray again struck with an RBI single and the Panthers went ahead 9-0 with four runs in the sixth on RBI singles by Allie Beach and Hailey Austin, a sacrifice fly from Andrea Searcy and a bases-loaded walk.

Williamstown finally broke up the shutout with three runs in the bottom of the sixth, but Carroll answered with three more in the seventh on an RBI double by Searcy and a run-scoring groundout by Austin.

Williamstown got three more runs in the seventh to close the gap to six but got no closer.

Carroll County out-hit Williamstown 14-6 and would have shut out the Demons if not for errors. None of the Demons' six runs against Searcy were earned thanks to three crucial miscues.

Carroll County softball improved to 9-0 by winning its first All "A" Classic 8th Region championship Thursday.

Searcy struck out 13 batters and walked three in another strong performance by the Carroll ace.

Ray and Mefford each went 4-for-4 at the plate with Ray collecting a double, a run scored and an RBI, and Mefford getting an RBI and two runs scored. Austin was 2-for-5 with two runs and two RBIs and Mallory Besselman had two hits and scored twice.

The Panthers rode Searcy's hot bat and strong arm into the championship game with a 9-2 win over Walton-Verona on Wednesday.

Searcy went 3-for-4 with a triple, three RBIs and a run scored and also struck out 13 batters with just one walk while allowing one earned run on seven hits in seven innings.

The Panthers got all of their runs in three different innings and each rally was started by Mefford.

Mefford led off the first inning with a double and scored on Beach's double. Searcy and Austin added back-to-back RBI singles and Ray had an RBI groundout to put Carroll ahead 4-0.

The Panthers struck again in the fourth when Mefford was hit by a pitch and scored on an error off the bat of Beach, who also scored on the same play.

After Walton scored two runs in the top of the sixth, Carroll got three more runs in the bottom half when Mef

Searcy, Mefford, Ray and Allie Beach were all named to the all-tournament team for Carroll.

Carroll (9-0) will play the Seventh Region champion in the first game of pool play at the state finals on Saturday, April 27 at Jack Fisher Park in Owensboro, Kentucky. Mark McFarland

McFarland resigns as Madison boys coach

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Mark McFarland has tendered his resignation as head boys basketball coach at Madison Consolidated High School.

The resignation was made public on Wednesday upon its approval by the Madison School Board of Trustees at the Board's monthly meeting.

"We would like to thank coach Mark McFarland for his dedication, time and energy he has invested in the Madison basketball program over the course of the last two years," Madison athletic director Joe Bronkella said in a statement. "We wish him the very best in his future coaching endeavors."

McFarland replaced Cliff Hawkins at the helm of the Cubs in the summer of 2017 and went 21-27 in two seasons. He took over a team that was 7-17 the year before he arrived and increased his win total each season to 9-15 in his first year and 12-12 this past season with predominantly young rosters. This past year's squad started three sophomores for much of the season.

Since Jim Matthews was fired after the 2008-09 season, the head coaching position at Madison has been a revolving door. No coach has lasted longer than three seasons with Ryan Crick, Pat King, Hawkins and McFarland combining to go 101-124 over a 10-year span with no sectional titles. Matthews was 78-56 in six seasons with two sectional titles and two regional runner-up finishes prior to his firing.

Bronkella said the vacancy was posted Thursday.

Southwestern's Winston to run cross country, track for Northern Kentucky

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Sports Writer

Southwestern's Bradley Winston has had plenty of chances to show why he's one of the best runners in southern Indiana. Now, he will get a chance to face off against the best runners in the country.

Winston will run for Northern Kentucky University in the fall in a continuation of a successful career at Southwestern High School that saw him reach three semistates in cross country and while dominating the local running scene.

The chance to run at a Division I college was a dream come true for the always cheerful Winston, who was smiling even bigger than usual.

"This whole cross country and track season has just been amazing," Winston said. "I've had the best coaches, the best teammates and it's just been a great experience."

Winston has been the Rebels' top runner since he burst onto the scene as a freshman and he has only gotten stronger. His coach Zac Nussbaum likes to joke that Winston is so used to being out front, that he gets mad if he's not leading a cool-down lap.

That success comes from more than just natural talent. A born leader, Winston is always the first one to step up and never shies away from hard work.

"I give an award every year for perfect attendance and he's never missed a practice in all four years," said Nussbaum, who coaches both cross country and track & field. "You know you have a special kid when your best runner is also your best kid. That's not to take away anything from the other kids. But he never misses, he works hard, he's perfect at leading by example. There's never been a practice where you wondered if he gave everything he had and that's great for the other kids to watch."

Winston was pursued by several colleges but quickly zeroed in on NKU, located in Highland Heights, Kentucky. The Norse have several athletes that he knows personally and the coaches made the school a perfect fit.

"One of my friend's coaches knew their coach and he put me on their radar," Winston said. "It has a great cross country and track program. Two of my buddies are going there so it's a great fit."

Winston, who plans on majoring in environmental science with an eye toward being a marine biologist, said that he had one goal his freshman year: "To get faster."

"Bradley is used to being out front and I think the first time he's in practice it will be an eye-opener for him to have other guys in front of him," Nussbaum said. "But that's just going to make him go faster. He doesn't like being behind somebody and he has the best drive I've ever seen."

Winston is the latest in a long line of Southwestern runners to reach the next level, joining Taylor Cole (St. Francis), Ethan Goebel (Indiana Tech) and Juli Lezama (Hanover), each of whom committed last year.

Southwestern's boys picked up 11 individual wins to claim a team victory while Switzerland County's girls edged Jac-Cen-Del by the narrowest of margins in a four-way track & field meet at Southwestern on Thursday.

Southwestern's boys scored 90 points to easily best runner-up Jac-Cen-Del with 59 points. Trinity Lutheran was third with 41 and Switzerland County fourth with 36. Switzerland's girls scored 68 points to edge Jac-Cen-Del by half a point. Southwestern was third with 59 and Trinity Lutheran fourth with 32.5.

Track & Field Roundup

Southwestern's Mitchell Cline picked up three individual wins to lead the Rebels on the day. Cline started off with an impressive win in the long jump at 18 feet, 7.5 inches and then won the 100-meter dash in 11.47 and the 200 dash in 23.32.

Owen Bates won two events, the high jump at 5 feet, 10 inches, and the 110 hurdles in 17.19. Other wins for the Rebels were: Jacob Grider, 400 dash, 55.25; Caleb Ream, 300 hurdles, 42.81; Bradley Winston, 3200 run, 10:51; the 3200 relay, 9:44; the 400 relay, 46.19; and the 1600 relay, 3:43.9.

"This is obviously a really talented team and their performance tonight was fun to watch. But they still have a lot of room to improve," Southwestern coach Zac Nussbaum said. "For this team to get where they want to be the leadership has to get better and the focus has to improve. But with the type of kids we have I have no doubt that they will get there."

Zach Howlett picked up a pair of wins for the Switzerland boys in shot put at 44 feet, 9.5 inches and the discus at 137 feet, one-half inch.

Other top finishes for the Southwestern boys were: Kaden Zellers, second, 100 dash, 12.14; Gavyn Mundt, second, 800 run, 2:18.69; Winston, third, 1600 run, 5:01; Devin Ruebush, third, 400 dash, 1:02.9; and Trevor Smith, Milah Young, a freshman from Granger, scored twice to lead Hanover while Boomershine and Kinna Laymon each added a goal. Julia Long made 12 saves in goal and scooped up a pair of groundballs.

Rebel netters 4-0 after 3-2 victory over Austin

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Southwestern's girls tennis team held off Austin 3-2 on Wednesday to win its home opener and improve to 4-0 on the season.

The Rebels spotted the Eagles the top two singles matches — the No. 2 in a three-set battle — but got a win at the third singles and swept both doubles to clinch the match and stay perfect on the season.

Tennis Roundup

"Pulled out another big win tonight vs. Austin for our home opener," Southwestern coach Kenny Garrett said. "Autumn Harmon played a solid match for us tonight at three singles. Chloe and Ashlyn have played like they have been together for several years — just a really good combination for us — and Ally and Audrey have really been solid at number two doubles improving to 5-1 on the season."

Harmon defeated Mayci Furnish 6-1, 6-2 and the No. 1 doubles team of Ashlyn Cloud and Chloe Adcock defeated Jess Spencer and Caitlin Royalty 6-3, 6-1 with the No. 2 Doubles pairing of Ally Voorhies and Audrey Bare defeating Gaia Venturie and Kendra Allen 6-0, 6-0.

Southwestern's Julia Worcester, a freshman at No. 1 singles, suffered a 6-3, 6-2 loss to Austin's Jalen Coomer.

"Julia ran into a tough opponent tonight," Garrett said. "The Austin number one player hit all cut shots from both sides and that can be frustrating to play against especially after playing on Tuesday against a topspin hitter."

Elle Ford, in just her second match back from an injury, shut out Austin's Sarah Robbins 6-0 in set one only to see her No. 2 singles match slip away 6-3, 6-4 in a comeback win by Robbins.

"Elle had the match of the night winning big in the first 6-0 but just getting complacent on her strokes as the match went on," Garrett said. "She just must trust her strokes and not play down to her opponent."

The win was Southwestern's second in two nights — both over big rival opponents. The Rebels will now host a strong Jennings County team on Friday at Hanover Park.

"Just a solid team win. We are really covering for each other if someone is having an off night and that's what continues to make us a contender every match," Garrett said.

Carroll tops Trimble 4-1

Trimble County won two of the three contested matches to claim a 4-1 victory over Carroll County in girls tennis on Thursday.

Breanna Sarver picked up an impressive 6-0, 6-0 win over Carroll's Johnica Spenneberg at No. 2 singles while the No. 1 doubles team of Isabella White and Michaela Hines beat Lorinda Bennett and Carmen Simo 6-3, 6-0 for Trimble's two wins. The Raiders also got forfeit wins at No. 3 singles and No. 2 doubles.

Carroll's lone win came at No. 1 singles where Ashley Spenneberg outlasted Trimble's Hannah Miracle 7-5, 6-3.

Carroll County hosts Gallatin County on Friday while Trimble faces North Bullitt on today.

Shawe falls 4-1 to Tigers

Shawe girls tennis lost 4-1 at Lawrenceburg on Thursday.

Phoebe Grote picked up Shawe's lone win with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Jasmyn Blackburn at No. 2 singles.

Abigail Hill played a close first set only to fall 7-5, 6-0 to Grace Stfaviyan at No. 1 singles and Kristin Snodgrass lost 6-3, 6-4 to Evelyn McAndrew in No. 3 singles.

In doubles action, Lina Leatherman and Kelly Hesse lost 6-2, 6-2 to Sheridan Houze and Macey Badenheimer at No. 1 and Caroline Grote and Jessica Lopez lost 6-4, 6-1 to Callie Pope and Kylie Morgan at No. 2.

Swiss rally falls short

The visiting Indians scored three runs in the first, second and fourth innings to push ahead 9-0 before Switzerland made its move in the sixth.

Allie Bruce got the rally started with an RBI single and two bases-loaded walks brought in two more runs. Jessie Duvall then hit a two-run double.

Switzerland eventually scored six runs in the sixth to pull within 9-6 before Milan scored a run in the seventh. The Pacers answered with a run in the bottom of the seventh but could get no closer.

Ariel Oeffinger was 2-for-4 with a run and an RBI for Switzerland while Madesyn Byrd had a hit and two RBIs.

Lily Sparks took the loss for the Pacers after giving up 10 runs — seven earned — on 15 hits in seven innings with six strikeouts and two walks.

Southwestern golfers get 1st match win

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Southwestern's boys golf team scored its first win of the season Wednesday in a four-team match with South Central (Elizabeth), Charlestown and Henryville at Champions Pointe Golf Club near Henryville.

The Rebels carded a 175 to beat South Central's 197 and Charlestown's 238 while Henryville did not field a complete team. However, the Hornets' Westin Allen was the low medalist with a one-over 37 that was a stroke better than teammate Sam Davidson's 38 and two lower than Southwestern's Hunter Mefford at 39.

"Westin and Sam carded good scores today. Cameron let a couple of holes get away from him, but other than those, he continues to improve," Henryville coach Robin Embry said. "We're looking forward to getting our fourth eligible."

Austin Kramer and Trenton Hadley both shot 44 for the Rebels and Cam Ashby carded a 48.

Harvey Basham led South Central with a 46 and Bryce Lewis shot a 47. Collin and Caden Cunningham shot 51 and 53, respectively.

Charlestown's top round was a 53 by Matt Carr. Andrew Martins carded a 58, Caden Doty 62, Ethan Ingram 65 and Casey Huntsinger 69.

Cameron Miller shot a 58 for Henryville's third and final score.

Southwestern returns to action on today when it competes in the Jennings County Invitational at St. Annes Golf Course.

Mistakes cost Shawe in 11-0 loss to Rebels at Post 9 Field

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

Mistakes at key times ruined any chance Shawe had at pulling out a win and Southwestern took advantage, scoring an 11-0 victory in baseball Wednesday at Post 9 Field in Madison.

Shawe committed only two errors, but both came at the worst times. Coupled with eight passed balls or wild pitches, it added up to six unearned runs and an early game.

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

"They scored six runs in the fourth and we had a tailor-made double play that would have gotten us out of the inning without any damage," Shawe coach Geno Pawlak said. "We didn't make a ton of mistakes in the field, but they were at the worst times and they made us pay for it."

Southwestern, which had lost four-straight since a season-opening win over South Central, was hungry for a win and the Rebels showed that with a big second inning.

After going down quietly in the first, Southwestern struck for five runs in the second thanks in large part to a pair of two-run doubles by Jackson Stockdale and Talon Harmon and one key Shawe error.

Southwestern (1-4, 1-1 Ohio River Valley) tacked on six more runs in the fourth inning. Although the Rebels had six hits in the inning, a crucial dropped pop-up in the infield ruined Shawe's chances of getting out of the inning early as only two of the runs scored in the inning were earned.

"When you're struggling and you're playing good opponents with good pitching, you just have to persevere moving forward," Southwestern coach Derik Hutton said. "We talked about this game being our reset button and starting over fresh and I think our guys did a pretty good job of coming out and fixing some things offensively. We were pretty efficient with guys on base and all in all, we played the way we feel we are capable of playing."

Southwestern finished the game with 11 hits with Tyler Kramer and Harmon collecting three each. Kramer also drove in two runs and scored once while Harmon had three RBIs and scored twice.

Mitchell Adcock had two hits and scored a run for the Rebels while Zach Cole and Landon DeAtley each had a hit and an RBI.

DeAtley also picked up the win on the mound after throwing three hitless innings with four strikeouts and a hit batter. Riley Elliott worked the final two innings and allowed two hits with four strikeouts and a walk.

"The name of the game in our conference is throwing strikes and after a pretty rough experience for him (last week), he came out and got a lot of first-pitch strikes and established the strikezone," Hutton said of DeAtley. "And he kept attacking and he threw his curveball for strikes. When you can do that, you're going to be effective."

DeAtley's counterpart, Walker Kennett, also pitched well at times but he was saddled with the loss after giving up nine runs on eight hits in three-plus innings with two strikeouts and two walks. Only five of the runs scored against Kennett were earned and, at times, he was dominating, allowing only one baserunner in the first and setting the side down in order in the third.

"Walker pitched well. Our pitching was pretty solid today," Pawlak said. "I didn't think we pitched too poorly. They scored a few off Walker and hit a couple over our outfielders, but for the most part, I thought he threw pretty well."

Shawe (0-4, 0-4 ORVC) managed only two hits in the game — singles by Hunter Kennett and Matthew Binzer. The Hilltoppers' best chance at scoring came in the fifth when they put two runners on base but the Rebels escaped the jam without any damage.

Southwestern was back in action Thursday, dropping a 6-2 loss to Henryville in Hanover.

The Hornets touched Southwestern ace Bailey Elliott for all five runs in the first but the Rebel starter calmed down after that and limited Henryville to just one run the rest of the way.

Southwestern scored a run in the bottom of the second and added another run in the fifth but got no closer.

Southwestern (2-5) hosts West Washington on Saturday. Shawe was to visit Switzerland County on Friday but a doubleheader at Columbus Christian on Saturday has been canceled. Southwestern (2-5) hosts West Washington on Saturday.

Carroll ousted at All 'A'

Carroll County baseball's bid to be crowned best the small school in the Eighth Region came up six runs short to host Williamstown in Wednesday's semifinals of the All "A" Classic Eighth Region Tournament.

Carroll jumped on top 3-0 after the top of the first inning but Williamstown struck for six runs in the first and six more in the second en route to the 14-8 win.

The Demons will now face Walton-Verona in the championship after the Bearcats rolled over Owen County 12-2 in five innings in Wednesday's other semifinal.

Both teams had eight hits each but the Panthers actually out-hit the Demons on paper, belting five doubles to go with a grand slam by Dane Lacefield to just two doubles and a solo home run by Kyron Held for Williamstown.

However, Williamstown made the most of its hits by issuing only three Carroll County walks compared to the eight issued by three different pitchers for the Panthers.

Carroll walked four, hit three batters and made three errors over the two disastrous innings when Williamstown built a 12-3 lead on starting pitcher Jacob Polley and reliever Zach Clifford.

Polley lasted just one-third of an inning with five runs — three earned — on two hits, a walk, two hit batters and two Carroll errors. Zach Clifford then gave up seven runs — six earned — in one and one-third innings on three hits and two walks while striking out three

After Williamstown scored another run in the third to push ahead 13-3, Carroll battled back in the top of the fourth when Blake Reynolds walked to lead off and David Duncan singled with one out before Polley doubled to drive in Reynolds.

Demons pitcher Tucker Gray struck out Clifford for the second out but then hit Logan Rodgers to load the bases before Lacefield belted a fly ball over the fence in center field for a grand slam that pulled the Panthers to within 13-8.

But that turned out to be the Panthers' last hurrah. Carroll managed only a lone single in the fifth and went down in order in the sixth. Williamstown pitched around Carroll County's power by walking Lacefield to open the seventh and issuing a two-out walk to Reynolds before striking out the next batter to strand both and end the game.

Lacefield led Carroll's offense with a two-run double and a grand slam to go with a walk and a run scored while going 2-for-3. Clifford, Duncan, Polley and Rodgers all hit doubles and Polley and Clifford both had RBIs.

Williamstown (11-2) had three players go 2-for-3 — Held, Gray and Cole Kemper — and Anthony Boiko was 1-for-4 with four RBIs while Isaiah Magee was 1-for-4 with three RBIs

Carroll (6-4) will play Bourbon County at 11 a.m. today.

Some kids roasted marshmallows and popped popcorn at the Heritage Trail Conservancy's new stone fire pit. Others took advantage of their Park Hop prizes: they looked at rocks through magnifying glasses, tossed their new Frisbees, and started playing with their wildlife trading cards. (Submitted photos)

Families stopped by the booths from Clifty Falls State Park and Big Oaks National Wildlife Refuge to touch a snake, a fur pelt from a raccoon, or a bobcat skull. Families visit parks across county

Oak Heritage Conservancy ends Park Hop with celebration

Courier staff report

The Oak Heritage Conservancy celebrated the end of the Park Hop last week with a gathering at Heritage Park.

More than 70 young people participated in a countywide scavenger hunt in which they used a tip sheet that listed 21 parks families could visit to answer clues about the park to prove they had visited.

"The goal was to get families outside, enjoying our parks and nature preserves," said Liz Brownlee, executive director of Oak Heritage Conservancy. "We wanted to introduce people to the treasure trove of parks in Jefferson County and be sure they know how much there is to explore and utilize in our community."

Oak Heritage spearheaded the event along with Clifty Falls State Park, the Jefferson County Public Library, King's Daughters' Hospital, Purdue Extension and the Heritage Trail Conservancy.

Young people who participated in the Park Hop were eligible to win the grand prize of one of five Indiana State Park passes. Many of those involved visited more than nine of the 21 parks involved.

Rachel Shaver, a parent and employee at Centerstone, said she turned the Park Hop into a field trip for young people involved with Centerstone. On this field trip, the young people visited 13 different parks and nature preserves in one day.

"I wanted to get the kids out and about in the community," said Shaver. "And I wanted them to spend some time away from their digital devices. We made a day of it with a picnic."

Shaver said she plans to keep using the Park Hop as a structure for field trips, even though the official Park Hop is done for this year.

Girls Inc. also made the Park Hop into a series of field trips where they visited a different park each day of Spring break. This helped the members have a chance to visit all 21 parks in Jefferson County.

"The whole idea of the Park Hop is that once families and kids visit a park, they're more likely to go back," said Brownlee. "Several parents told me on Saturday that they had never been to Webster Woods Nature Preserve. That's one of our preserves, and it has a nice little walking trail through the woods that's perfect for young families. But it's only perfect if people know it's there for them to enjoy. The Park Hop means we can share the preserve with more people, and be of use."

Volunteers help feed Indiana

Courier staff report

The Jefferson County United Way awarded Hoosiers Feeding the Hungry a grant that will be used to serve Jefferson County residents. The funds from this grant will help Hoosiers Feeding the Hungry pay processing fees for large game and livestock donations within Jefferson County. The meat processed from this will then be given to area hunger-relief agencies.

Founded in 2011, Hoosiers Feeding the Hungry works with area hunters and farmers to take their large game or livestock to a participating meat processor where the donation is processed, packaged and frozen at no cost. Local hunger-relief agencies will then be contacted for pickup and distribution of the frozen meat back into the community.

"We are very excited about oue 'Meat' the Need program," said Debra Treesh, executive director of Hoosiers Feeding the Hungry. "We're pleased that Jefferson County United Way is continually willing to make an investment in the community."

According to Feeding America's "Map the Meal Gap," 31 percent of working Indiana residents who are food insecure do not qualify for food-assistance programs. These residents turn to charitable food assistance networks like food banks, pantries, hunger ministries and other places.

"The grant provided by Jefferson County United Way will pay to process about 1,200 pounds of donated large game and livestock, which will then be distributed to area hunger-relief agencies — providing almost 4,500 meals to residents in need within our communities," Treesh said.

Over the last several years, Hoosiers Feeding the Hungry has helped distribute about 1.2 million pounds of meat to Indiana food banks, providing more than 5 million meals to Hoosiers in need.

Venison is one of the meats that Hoosiers Feeding the Hungry regularly donates to local food banks, pantries, hunger ministries and other places. (Submitted photo)

"To date, we have 83 participating meat processors working within 85 counties in Indiana to aid us in our mission and to ensure residents in need are served," said Amber Zecca, fund development director of Hoosiers Feeding the Hungry. "In Jefferson County, we are partnering with Pate's Processing Plant, Gleaners Food Bank and other local hunger-relief agencies to ensure residents have access to this nutritious protein."

Hoosiers Feeding the Hungry is accepting donations to fund the "Meat" the Need program throughout Indiana and is continuously looking for volunteers to help their efforts to feed the hungry and reduce hunger issues throughout Indiana. For more information about the Hoosiers Feeding the Hungry program, go to www.HoosiersFeedingtheHungry.org

2 neighborhood 4-H clubs

Jefferson County 4-H has created two new neighborhood 4-H clubs for youth in grades 3 to 12.

These new clubs were created and organized in locations that will allow youth to walk to and from the meetings. The first meeting at each location will be Tuesday, April 16 at 4 p.m. at the Salvation Army in Madison and Thursday, April 18 at 4:30 p.m. at the Hanover Park Community Center.

Jefferson County Purdue Extension Education Angela Rathert and Program Assistant Bess Adams will be leading these clubs. Rathert said she hopes they will recruit more volunteers as they go.

4-H club work reaches youth through a variety of programs and activities that are hands-on, age-appropriate, educational and fun. 4-H helps youth improve their self-confidence, learn subject matter and develop important life skills. For more information, call (812) 265-8919.

Competition in yoga class and other events in golden years

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: For the past four years, I have taken a yoga class at our local senior center. I am there to work on my physical self, as well as to learn a new way of exercising, and I have enjoyed yoga a great deal. However, I have found that there is a level of competitiveness among a few women in this class that really takes away from what I believe is the spirit of yoga and self-improvement in general.

There is one particular woman who is vocal to those who can do things she isn't so skilled at, such as balancing during certain poses. Recently, she pointed out that one of our classmates was able to touch the floor with her head during a pose. Worse, the instructor is also competing with us and a while back asked me whether I was "showing off" because I had lifted my foot so high. These are women in their 70s still competing and envious and mocking others!

I see this in other walks of life, too — for example, women who brag about how many people they have at their family holiday events or how many hours they worked in their yards or how early they got their Christmas decorations up or down.

I was really hoping that by the time we got to these golden years — done with work, focused on self-enrichment and living our best lives — this competitiveness would have stopped. I am calling it out to you because I wonder whether others have experienced this among their female friends. Why does it still feel like middle school in these situations? Can't we all just commit to compliments instead of competition as we live out our last years? — Troubled by One-upmanship

Dear Troubled: Real queens fix each other's crown. Yoga is about acceptance of others and not feeling judged. The "best" yoga practitioner has the best intention in her heart. It is not necessarily the person who can touch her toes. There are plenty of people who are physically very flexible but not flexible in their thinking.

Though you can't really change what these women do, you can change how you view their silliness. This is true in yoga and in life. The more you compliment others the more you will attract like-minded people. There are women who feel the way you do; you just have to find them. The best way to do that is to become one yourself. Be the person you would want to be friends with to others. You will attract the queens of the world, and you can lift one another up.

As for this yoga class in particular, you might drop it and find a new one. It could be that this instructor is setting the tone for the entire class.

Dear Annie: The weekly family dinners that "Saddened" and his wife host are likely a saving grace for their son and family. Parenting young children is exhausting, and if both parents work outside the home, the last thing one wants to do is host company for dinner. There could be myriad reasons the son and daughter-in-law don't host, but I would guess it's not for a lack of love or appreciation.

I remember that season of raising my children, and I was always beyond grateful when my mother-in-law would have us over for a meal, often forgetting to offer to bring something. Whether or not the offer is ever reciprocated, this family is building happy memories for years to come, and that's the most important thing. "Saddened" needs to lower his expectations. — Been There

Dear Been There: Your letter offers a very empathetic perspective regarding the parents of young children. Thank you for sharing and pointing out the beauty that these family memories will have for a lifetime.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! Annie Lane's debut book – featuring favorite columns on love, friendship, family and etiquette – is available as a paperback and e-book. Visit http://www.creatorspublishing.com for more information. BRIDGE

DISCIPLINED BIDDING AND DEADLY DEFENSE

Katharine Hepburn said, "Without discipline, there's no life at all." Without discipline at the bridge table, the game becomes more like craps than an intellectual exercise.

In today's example, how should the defense proceed after West leads the heart 10 against two spades?

Notice the disciplined bidding by everyone. North's two-heart cue-bid raise showed three- or four-card spade support and at least game-invitational values. Despite the 11 high-card points, this was a slight stretch because his heart king was probably not pulling its weight, and he had nine losers (three spades, two hearts, three diamonds and one club), which is the normal number for a single raise. South, with six-and-a-half losers, did not try for game. That was a wise decision, given that even two spades was too high!

After winning the first trick with his heart queen, East led the diamond king, king from ace-king after trick one. When West signaled encouragingly with the 10, East cashed the diamond ace and led the diamond seven, an unnecessary suit-preference signal for hearts.

West, after ruffling, led his heart nine. East took that trick and played his last diamond, knowing that West would be able to ruff higher than the dummy to defeat the contract. The defenders took two hearts, two diamonds and two ruffs.

Several of the examples used this week and next were sent to me by Steve Conrad of Manhasset, Long Island. He is an expert player who teaches on a few cruises each year and has a keen eye for an instructive deal.

Department of Natural Resources protects baby wildlife

The Indiana Department of Natural Resources Division of Fish & Wildlife is encouraging Hoosiers to keep wildlife wild by leaving them where they belong.

If you encounter a baby animal alone, DNR says to remember:

• Adult animals rarely abandon their young. The parent may be out of sight gathering food. Leaving young unattended is normal for many species. To minimize discovery by predators, adults return only a few times a day.

• Do not hover to see if a parent has come back to their young. An adult animal will not come near if a person is standing nearby. Give young animals space and only check back periodically. If you can't tell if a mother has checked on a nest, place straw or grass over the nest and return later to see if it has been disturbed.

• Baby animals should not be handled. Though human scent may not cause parents to abandon their young, it can alert predators to the young animal's presence. They can also carry diseases or parasites that may transfer to people and young animals can inflict damage by biting or scratching people trying to help.

The natural resources department reminds that rescuing young wildlife is legal, but keeping them is not. You can rescue truly orphaned and/or injured wild animals without a permit, but the animal must be given to a permitted wildlife rehabilitator who is trained on how to properly raise and release the species within 24 hours. A list of wildlife rehabilitators is available at wildlife.IN.gov/5492.htm

Wild animal possession permits cannot be obtained for a young animal collected from the wild. If you are interested in becoming wildlife rehabilitator, information is at wildlife.IN.gov/5492.htm

United States Postal Service gears toward fewer dog bites

Dog bite attacks in Indiana dropped 12.77 percent in 2018, according to the U.S. Postal Service's annual list of cities and states with the most recorded dog attacks.

The number of postal employees attacked by dogs nationwide fell to 5,714 in 2018, which was more than 500 fewer than in 2017 and more than 1,000 fewer since 2016. None of Indiana's cities were included in this year's top 20 list.

National Dog Bite Prevention Week is Sunday, April 14, through Saturday, April 20. At the kickoff event Friday, April 11, the Postal Service highlighted technology as a likely factor in helping to reduce potential attacks. USPS also highlighted safety initiatives to help protect its employees and offers tips to pet owners.

According to their data, technology supports carrier safety in at least two ways: Mobile Delivery Devices, or scanners, used by carriers to confirm customer delivery, include a feature to indicate the presence of a dog at an individual address. And the Package Pickup application asks customers to indicate if dogs are at their addresses when they schedule package pickups, which allows USPS to send alerts to those carriers.

"Our employees have been great at taking preventative measures against dog attacks, but they need help from our customers, too," said USPS Safety Director Linda DeCarlo. "We are confident we can keep moving the trends of attacks downward, and ramping overall awareness for everyone is the best way to do that."

"It's encouraging to see the number of dog bite incidents decline," said Shelia Helmold, Greater Indiana District Safety Manager. "We very much appreciate that more customers are keeping their dogs up when the letter carrier is delivering mail."

The Postal Service offers the following safety tips for carriers and customers:

• When a letter carrier delivers mail or packages to your front door, place your dog in a separate room and close that door before opening the front door. Dogs have been known to burst through screen doors or plate glass windows to attack visitors.

• Parents should remind children and other family members not to take mail directly from letter carriers in the presence of the family pet. The dog may view the letter carrier handing mail to a family member as a threatening gesture.

• If a letter carrier feels threatened by a dog, or if a dog is loose or unleashed, the owner may be asked to pick up mail at a Post Office or another facility until the letter carrier is assured the pet has been restrained. If the dog is roaming the neighborhood, the pet owner's neighbors also may be asked to pick up their mail at the area's Post Office.

Residents graduate from Western Governors University

Six area residents were among recent graduates of Western Governors University, an online, non-profit university.

The students from the Courierarea are:

• Angela Stephan of Hanover, who earned a master of science, nursing in education.

• Brooke Humphreys of Madison, who earned a master of science, curriculum and instruction.

• Emily Spitler of Madison, who earned a master of science, nursing in leadership and management.

• Lee Ann Webster of Madison, who earned a master of business administration.

• Orville Upchurch of Madison, who earned a master of science, nursing in leadership and management.

• Victoria Demaree of Madison, who earned a bachelor of science in nursing.

WGU has recognized 12,920 undergraduate and 8,885 graduate degree recipients, who have completed degrees since June 1, 2018. Their areas of study include business, K-12 education, information technology, and health professions, including nursing.

WGU was established in 1997 by 19 U.S. governors with a mission to expand access to high-quality, affordable higher education. WGU now serves more than 114,000 students nationwide and has more than 136,000 graduates in all 50 states.

Ball State raises almost $50,000

Members of the Ball State Community raised almost 3,770 in gifts totaling almost $425,000 as part of the One Ball State Day, a 24-hour fundraiser for the university on April 9.

President Geoffrey S. Mearns said One Ball State Day exceeded expectations, both in dollars raised and the number of gifts.

"It was wonderful to see Cardinals from across the country — alumni, faculty and staff, students, parents and friends — joining together to give to the areas of the university that matter most to them," Mearns said. "These philanthropic investments will support academic programs, student organizations and numerous funds that make possible the transformative impact our university has on the lives of thousands of women and men. I am grateful to everyone who participated."

Gifts and overall investment into the university will continue to rise in the coming days and weeks as they are still coming in.

The top three areas for gifts during One Ball State Day were raised for the Department of Theatre and Dance, Athletics, and the Ball State Fund, which is designed to address the greatest needs of the university. Matching gifts and challenges included the areas of Athletics, Student Life, Greek Life, Paul W. Parkison Department of Accounting, the College of Fine Arts and the Department of Journalism.

One Ball State Day totals were boosted by numerous challenges and matching gifts and the celebration of the 1,918th gift, which commemorated the year Ball State was founded. In addition, hundreds of Ball State supporters spread the #OneBallState spirit on social media over a 24-hour period by sharing posts and photos, videos, stories and their reasons for giving.
